It is now a settled matter that we are to have a Steam Mill at last. A company has been formed, composed of gentlemen who are capitalists and business men in every sense of the term-men who will take hold of the matter in real earnest-and who will be on hands in person. These are the men we can place confidence in; not your silk gloved gentry, who cannot contribute labor as well as capital, but both. We always do like to see men at the head of an enterprise that we feel a personal interest in, that can sing out, "Come on, Boys!"
